Airing in the late night, the mysterious anime, "serial experiments lain," is unlike most other anime shows since its sounds are stoically limited. In general, in the world that uses animation as one of the symbolic measures, music is used excessively to fill the hole for lacking information or in place of emotional expression and situations. Occasionally, such tactics dramatically power up the result and lead to a tremendous impact on the film, however, this is only one technique. How else is it used?

The mass manufactured music throughout a series is consumed as a matter of course. If there are some incomplete production, music will fill the hole as a cover-up.

The music holds power. Perhaps I should be careful as a film maker of depending on the infinite power of music. Music should exist because it's necessary for the film. The reason why I wanted Reichi Nakaido, a musician representing the best of Japan, involved was to bring out the music I wanted for this film. On the surface, this product seems to be an anime with horror taste that takes place on the network, but what this anime describes at the end is... For that purpose, I needed his music.

In this CD, each track was created based on the theme of a distinct instance and I believe that you will FEEL Reichi Nakaido through them all. Although it does not appear to be that way, in "lain", the project's fundamental theme is EXISTENCE = LIFE. EXISTENCE is not a memory or information. It is by FEELING, therefore that it is meaningful.

Signal of Solitude

Song Lyrics and Music Composed by: Reichi Nakaido

Before even knowing the meaning of being in love
To get connected with somebody who is nobody somewhere

You are sending a signal of solitude into the
endless night

Before knowing the meaning of getting hurt
To get connected with somebody who is nobody with anything

You are waiting for a signal of solitude in the
endless night

Ah what do you want? Why you are there?
Ah what are you afraid of? Why you are there?
Ah what kind of future are you going to undertake?

I want to meet with one who loves,
and one should be loved
All people always want to meet someone soon

If you realize what is precious to you
A person may meet with treasure who is like nobody else
You are sending a signal of solitude into the unseen tomorrow

Ah what do you want? Why you are there?
Ah what are you afraid of? Why you are there?
Ah what kind of future are we going to undertake?

I want to meet with one who loves,
and one should be loved
All people always want to meet someone soon

I want to meet with one who loves,
and one should be loved
All people always want to meet with someone soon for sure
